Dan Garcia is an associate in the Energy, Construction and Government Relations Practice Groups in Leech Tishman's Pittsburgh office.

Dan has a vast amount of experience with oil and gas midstream development programs. During the course of his career, he has handled a wide variety of pipeline safety and regulatory issues to ensure compliance with PHMSA and Pennsylvania Utility Commission regulations. Dan has advised clients in the development of comprehensive pipeline safety and compliance programs. He also has extensive experience in issues relating to rights-of-way, landowner disputes, easements, condemnation proceedings, and other midstream-related land issues.

Dan possesses a solid understanding of midstream economics and pipeline construction and development, with experience in program management, capital expansion and investment projects and the effective navigation of state and federal pipeline regulations.

Dan also has a background in government relations in Texas and Pennsylvania. As the District Director for a Texas State Representative, he developed relationships with various state agencies like TXDOT and the Railroad Commission. In Pennsylvania, Dan has been a presenter on various oil and gas topics at a number of public forums, township meetings, and conferences and is a strong advocate for the industry.

Prior to joining Leech Tishman, Dan served as the Business Development Director with Bowman Consulting Group, where he was responsible for the development and execution of their Strategic Growth Plan, leading to expansion opportunities in land development and oil & gas infrastructure (gas and liquids pipeline development) across the country.

Dan is fluent in Spanish, Cambodian and French with experience in Thai and Japanese.
