Born and raised in the South Hills of Pittsburgh, I went to Alderson-Broaddus College as a biology/chemistry and physics major and achieved a 3.65 QPA. While in college, I worked as an intern for the US Fish and Wildlife Services researching benethic invertebrates on the Gauley River Project, was a member of the ZAG and Phi Delta Sigma Fraternities and maintained the college's greenhouse.

Upon graduation, I began my career in a management position with USS/American Bridge and worked at three of the nation's largest steel mills. When American Bridge was sold to acquire Marathon Oil, I moved back to Pittsburgh to renew my pursuit of a medical career as a biochemistry technician in Montefiore Hospital Nutritional Division. I advanced to the plastic surgery department where my surgical skills were noted and was invited to develop a micro- surgery finger and toe re-plantation training program for the Univ. of Pittsburgh. . I taught microsurgery to the surgeons for several years before being asked to head up the neurosurgery research department at Allegheny General Hospital under the Steeler's neurosurgeon, Dr. Joe Maroon. For five years, we remained on the cutting edge of developing new laser and surgical techniques. From my work at AGH, Zeiss microscope company offered me a position as their area sales and service representative which launched a medical sales career covering a multi-state territory.

After several years, I missed the opportunity to work in a hospital environment and accepted a position with Dr Mark May at Shadyside Hospital to coordinate his ear, nose, and throat program. Dr. May retired in 1997 upon selling his practice to the newly formed UPMC. I remained as the clinical coordinator of the department until 2011 when I accepted the position with the Allegheny County Health Department as an Environmental Health Specialist II.

As a father of five sons, my personal life involved working with them as a homeschooled family until we moved to Bethel Park in 2000, My wife and I were active Boy Scouts leader and used this experience for mentoring boys and young men for over 25 years both in Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts.

My interests and hobbies involve gardening, equestrian trail riding, blacksmithing, motorcycling and working with the Peters Creek Watershed and the Allegheny County Conservation Corps for manure management. In addition, I recently started the Penn State Master Gardener Program at PSU in Pittsburgh.

I would like to make a difference to help ensure that the park resources are managed to their utmost, helping to provide active protection and proper utilization of the trails and all of the elements of the park.

Sue thank you for the opportunity to serve Allegheny County and our beautiful parks.

Sincerely, Ed
